

Raven's Digital Artifact

By: Raven Johnson

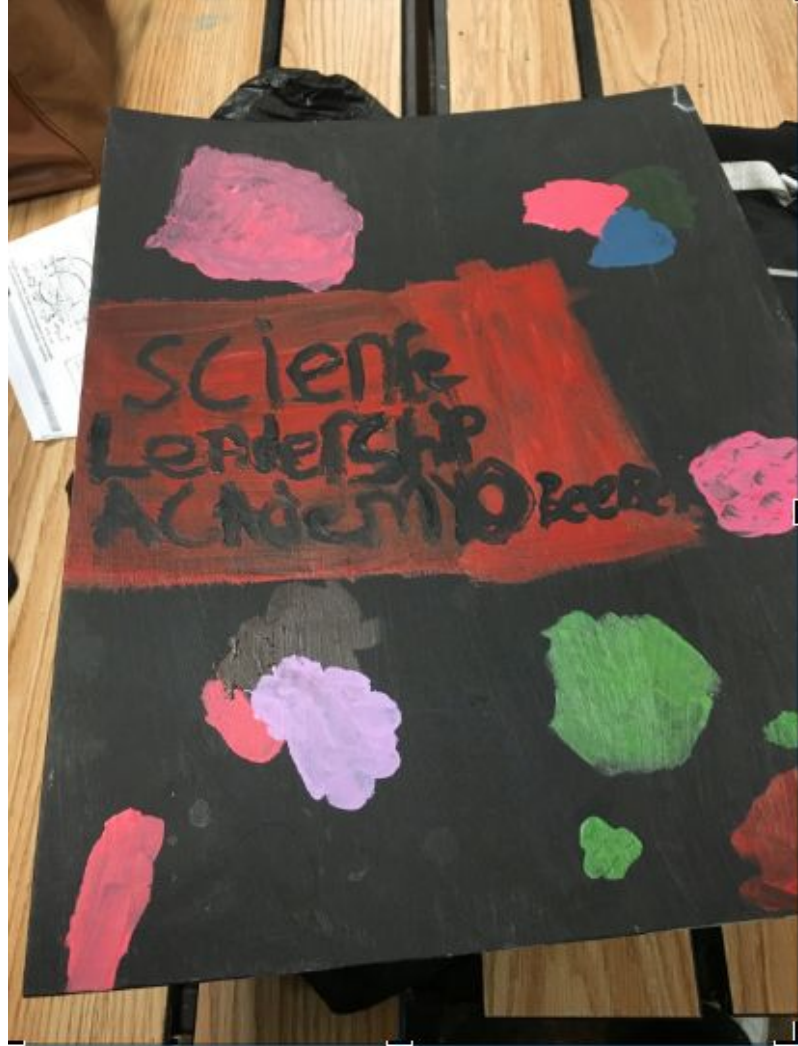

Quarter 1

My project from the first quarter was a color wheel. Everyone had to do it but i made it my personal objective to make the color wheel my own. I used water colors and mixed colors to get the different primary and secondary colors. I liked how it came out especially because i did not believe that i had little to no artistic ability. The picture below is not my color wheel but it is similar to what mine looked like.

Quarter 2

My project from the second quarter I had to paint something in the room. I decided to paint the curtain that is in the room that another student designed. I used acrylic paint and used a mixing technique to get the different light and dark colors. I liked how it came out but I could have made the painting closer looking like the real thing.

Quarter 3

My project from the third quarter was my favorite project. We had to make a project that represent past, present, and future. I wanted to do something that had to do with something that I liked a lot. Therefore I decided to do something that would have to do with batman. I ended up making a flashlight batman signal for Ms. Aziz's new room. I used tinkercad to create my design and I used the laser cutter to bring it to life. I could have painted my piece to make it more visually appealing.

As an artist this year i have grown a lot. I went from in the first quarter barely knowing how to use watercolors, to in the last quarter working with a laser cutter. Which is something id never thought id do.

This art class has allowed me step outside my artistic boundaries and experience new things. This year showed me that anyone can be an artist. I have learned this about myself first handedly from my projects. My biggest challenge this year was not getting discouraged. There were often times when i thought my art wasn't good enough but decided to push forward.

My weakness this quarter was not giving up. I often thought that i couldn't do things because there was a lot of times when i have messed up and had to start over. This made me think that i wasn't good enough, but eventually i overcame this and made the best art to my abilities.

My Favorite project

My favorite project was definitely my flashlight bat-signal. This was my favorite because it was very fun and it related to something i liked a lot. I am most proud of it because it was my first time using a laser printer and even though i had a few trial and errors it still came out to be a pretty good project

The type i would like to make next would be some type of sculpture or pottery. I have always found sculpting very interesting and i would like to do one one day. Pottery is another activity that seems very fun to do. I could also learn a lot about art from it.

The type of art that interests me most is abstract art. I like this the most because i feel like there is no right or wrong with this art. The artist has complete artistic painting and can paint anything that comes to their minds.
